Today's First Reading comes from the Book of Wisdom in the First Testament of the Bible. It speaks about "the just one" and how his words and actions seem to be offensive to the rest of the community. He is called "obnoxious." Why? Because he reproaches them for their transgressions among other things.

In reflecting on the words of this reading, I am reminded of the ways in which we respond to people in our lives who point out our faults and shortcomings. You know, the friend who somehow can always point to the exact thing that we've done to show how selfish or thoughtless we've been in a situation or how poorly we have treated someone else. We don't usually feel immediate gratitude for what that friend has to say. We usually vehemently deny what they have to say and very often wish they would just keep their words to themselves. And yet, in most instances that friend is the person we rely upon when we need advice or help. Why? Because we know that friend has our best interests at heart. Prophets in the Old Testament were friends of God who called God's people to accountability for the relationship they had with God. That accountability came in the form of living in right relationship with the people around them and caring for one another's needs, as God cared for them. Prophets were not liked, and, in many instances, the words of this reading became reality – "Let us condemn him to a shameful death..." because of the call to accountability. And yet, they persisted because of their friendship with God.

Lent is a seasonal call to accountability regarding our relationship with God. It is a time to reflect on the relationships in our lives that need repair due to our selfishness or our thoughtlessness or even our apathy. Lent is a time for us to discover new ways of living in right relationship with God and one another and eliminating all that keeps us from doing so. It is a time to listen to the prophets among us. It is a time to find and listen to the prophet – the friend of God within us to determine a new way of being in the world as a friend of God and a friend to all who are created by a loving God. Even those who point out our faults and our shortcomings.

Lectionary: 248

Reading 1 Wis 2:1a, 12-22

The wicked said among themselves,
thinking not aright:
“Let us beset the just one, because he is obnoxious to us;
he sets himself against our doings,
Reproaches us for transgressions of the law
and charges us with violations of our training.
He professes to have knowledge of God
and styles himself a child of the LORD.
To us he is the censure of our thoughts;
merely to see him is a hardship for us,
Because his life is not like that of others,
and different are his ways.
He judges us debased;
he holds aloof from our paths as from things impure.
He calls blest the destiny of the just
and boasts that God is his Father.
Let us see whether his words be true;
let us find out what will happen to him.
For if the just one be the son of God, he will defend him
and deliver him from the hand of his foes.
With revilement and torture let us put him to the test
that we may have proof of his gentleness
and try his patience.
Let us condemn him to a shameful death;
for according to his own words, God will take care of him.”
These were their thoughts, but they erred;
for their wickedness blinded them,
and they knew not the hidden counsels of God;
neither did they count on a recompense of holiness
nor discern the innocent souls’ reward.

Responsorial Psalm 34:17-18, 19-20, 21 and 23

R. (19a) The Lord is close to the brokenhearted.

The LORD confronts the evildoers,
to destroy remembrance of them from the earth.
When the just cry out, the LORD hears them,
and from all their distress he rescues them.

R. The Lord is close to the brokenhearted.

The LORD is close to the brokenhearted;
and those who are crushed in spirit he saves.

Many are the troubles of the just man,
but out of them all the LORD delivers him.

R. The Lord is close to the brokenhearted.

He watches over all his bones;
not one of them shall be broken.

The LORD redeems the lives of his servants;
no one incurs guilt who takes refuge in him.

R. The Lord is close to the brokenhearted.

Verse Before the Gospel Mt 4:4b

One does not live on bread alone,
but on every word that comes forth from the mouth of God.

Gospel Jn 7:1-2, 10, 25-30

Jesus moved about within Galilee;
he did not wish to travel in Judea,
because the Jews were trying to kill him.
But the Jewish feast of Tabernacles was near.

But when his brothers had gone up to the feast,
he himself also went up, not openly but as it were in secret.

Some of the inhabitants of Jerusalem said,
"Is he not the one they are trying to kill?
And look, he is speaking openly and they say nothing to him.
Could the authorities have realized that he is the Christ?
But we know where he is from.

When the Christ comes, no one will know where he is from."
So Jesus cried out in the temple area as he was teaching and said,
"You know me and also know where I am from.

Yet I did not come on my own,
but the one who sent me, whom you do not know, is true.

I know him, because I am from him, and he sent me."

So they tried to arrest him,
but no one laid a hand upon him,
because his hour had not yet come.
